

From Jean Aellen

The programme shows a walk at Wick / Doynton for 27 April and Castle Combe / Ford for 25 May.

I have re-walked them both over the last two days and there is an incredibly unpleasant boot sucking sloppy and deep mud spot on the Wick / Doynton route. I was concerned about falling flat on my face into the mud but survived. It may well dry out over the next 10 - 12 days but I am going to be away so won't have a chance to check again, and I don't want to risk any mud baths with the Friday amble group.

I would therefore like to bring the Castle Combe walk forward to 27 April (that was muddy but nothing like Doynton), and move the Wick / Doynton walk to 25 May. At least that will give me a chance to have another look at the mud spot, and more time for it to dry out (or get sloppier).

Jean
